

FCC,

Since subscribing to XM radio, I have found more and more content that I rely on daily- this includes local traffic and weather information from various cities around the U.S. As a frequent traveler, I love my new found ability to check local weather and traffic in the cities I WILL be travelling to, before I get there. Why should I have to be in a particular region to understand what is going on there? Why allow the USA Today to exist then? Does the USA Today kill the local news print industry? No.

The U.S. is starting on a slippery slope of limiting content and free speech to its citizens. Please realize that things change, and being that we are in the U.S., change is generally for the better.

Leave XM alone to create + progress, Barton Bodell Seattle, WA